

ANIMALS, SOCIETY AND BUSINESS

Velp (Arnhem) Bachelor English 4 years

Improve the health and welfare of animals

In short

Do you want to play a role in the development of the livestock farming sector? With the study Animals, Society and Business, you could become an advisor who helps farmers innovate, conducts practice-oriented research, creates new policies, or run your own business.

What you will learn

During your studies in Animals, Society and Business, you will learn everything about animal health, nutrition, reproduction, and breeding. Additionally, you will delve into the management and social aspects of the livestock sector, such as marketing, financial management, entrepreneurship, and innovation. You will develop research skills and work on real-life cases, often in collaboration with professionals from the field. In the later years of your studies, you will do internships and choose a minor to deepen or broaden your knowledge.

“I have discovered that my true passion lies not in curing animals, but in keeping them healthy.”
